Because of his connection with several of the steamers which have been run from this city, he has been particularly interested in learning of all those which used to make this city their starting point. He referred to the recent reading of an interesting book, Old Steamship Days on the Hudson, by David Lear Buckman, which caused him to think how interesting it would be if someone would take the time to gather the data and teresting it would be if someone would take the time to gather the data and in an interesting way tell the story of the Thames, our own beautiful river, that has been the seat of much boating activity since early days.

"My memory," said Mr. Smith, "only goes back to the steamers New York and Boston of the Norwich line that occasionally came to our wharves and the smaller though more regular visitors to our piers, the City of Lawrence and the City of Norwich, this latter still in existence on the Hudson "There was also the steamer Delaware, operated between Norwich and New York by an independent company, which now run the Chelsea on the same line.

Edward Smith was in charge all through the thrilling experiences that came to her. She was used for various purposes. At one time she was a despatch boat between Fortress Mon-roe, Va., and the surrounding vicinroe, Va., and the surrounding vicinity. At other times she was used to carry troops up and down the Chesapeake bay, to make raids upon the guerillas up the many rivers in and around the Hampton roads country. On one occasion she went up the Nancymund river with General Graham's flotilla with a detachment of 250 soldiers and captured a rebel battery at the head of the river. MISS WILLARD'S ANNIVERSARY. Celebrated by the Y's with a Memoria

The anniversary of Miss Frances E. Willard's birth was celebrated on Taesday night by the Ys at the room of the W. C. T. U. The memorial address was delivered by Rev. M. S. Kaufman, D.D. He said in part: While a student at the Northwestern in the student at the student a a student at the Northwestern univer-sity and Garrett Biblical institute Evanston, Ill., I formed the acquaint-ance of Miss Willard and esteem it as stone into the channel and sank it there, blocking navigation. At this time she was in close range of a rebel battery, which did its best to disable her but all to no purpose. When Gen. Nelson A. Miles was in command at Fortress Monroe and Jef-ferson Davis was a prsioner there, General Miles used the Elia as his private vessel. one of the richest experiences of my life to have known personally one who so nearly reached the ideal of Chris-fian womanhood. Born of humble yet heroic parents, she inherited the physfian womanhood. Born of humble yet heroic parents, she inherited the physical, mental and moral qualities which are conducive to high attainment and splendid achievement. Her birthplace is Churchville, N. Y. September 28, 1838. But her girlhood was spent chiefly at Oberlin. O., and then on a farm near Janesville, Wis. When she was 19, her father moved with his family to that celebrated educational center. Evanston, Ill., where her advantages were excellent. She became a teacher of exceptional abilities and was promoted of the dean of the woman's college of the university. In 1874 came a crisis in her life. The same mail brought to her two letters. One offered her the principaliship of an elegant school for young women in New York city, with a salary of $2,400. The other asked her to take the presidency of a feeble temperance society in Illinois. She declined the former and accepted the latter. She says: "No words can alequately characterize the change wrought in my life by this decision." It meant privation, war, anguish of soul, but it proved to be the path to greatness and renown. She became the uncrowned empress of millions of hearts all around the earth, one of the most royal souls with whom God ever entrusted essential sovereignty, one of private vessel.

During the winter of 1865 the Ella was operated on the St. Johns river, in Florida. She was then sold to Boston parties and taken from there to all around the earth, one of the most royal souls with whom God ever entrusted essential sovereignty, one of the choicest spirits that has ever graced our human race. As a great leader of women in the temperance work she has never had an equal in Statuary hall of our national capital stands her statute by the side of Washington. Every way worthy of that high distinction. Miss Willard was great in mind-power and heartwas great in mind-power and heart-power, great as an organizer and executive, captivating as a speaker and fascinating as a writer, but greatest of all in the rounded completeness of her queenly, Christian character. During the height of the Ella's successful career the steamer G. R. Kelsey made her appearance on the river, and she was operated by an opposition company, who eventually were instrumental in bringing out the steamer Biock Island, which has just closed to 28th season here. There was a duet by Mr. Hilton and Miss Christman and a few words from Miss Harriet Cross and Miss Nellie Starr. It was voted to postpone the Y meetings during the evangelistic conference.
